the Style of "Charley's Aunt."

Musical Director Rostetter Made the Intercollegiate Athletic Games at Victim of a Joke.

"No," said Charles Frohman yesterday. before it was presented in London. How? Well, I knew that it was to to be produced, and I knew that if it not with suc cess I should have it. It has met with success and I've got it. Yes, of course it is on the style of 'Charley's Aunt. All new farces will be. The old-timers those that deal with situations in which doors play the principal part, are com pletely played out. I have twenty or thirty of them on hand, and I shall not present them. The public is dead tired of them. There has been a surfeit of nothing eise. I have done several of them and I plead guilty, but I intend to reform. The trouble with the old farces is that all the characters in them get tangled up for no reason at all. They do idiotic things just for the fun of doing them, and without rhyme or reason. In the new style of farce the idiotic things are done, but the characters in the farce don't know that they are idiotic. The audience knows it, and that is all that is necessary. The audience should see the absurdity of the situation at once, but the people in the play should be apparently unaware of anything incongruous. This is the only reason why 'Charley's Aunt' has been a success all over the world. It isn't a classic; it isn't intellectual; it isn't brilliantly witty. It simply shows a set of people doing absurd things in good faith, and unaware that they are absurd. The New Boy' will be another instance of this.

They had a good laugh at the expense of Rostetter, the musical director of Rostetter, the musical director of Roster & Bial's, the other day, and it was all on acount of the Royal Wrestling Lion. "Old fellow," said Stage Manser Wilson "you know what a soothmarker wilson "you know what he soothmarker wilson "you know what a soothmarker wilson "you know what he soothmarker wilson "y

Otis Skinner-alack' and alas'-is going to try "Hamlet." He is very kind and thoughtful about it, though. He will not force it upon people-oh! dear, not he will never be satisfied until he haz made the essay. "I wish I knew what the verdict on my Hamlet will be, but there is only one way to find out." There is, sles! there is.

Here's a letter from a dotting mother, foll of the most exquisite maternal solutide. She says you can almost impaine the tear-washed utterances: "You will confer a great favor on me if you will kindly insert in your paper, that Pliss Lella Wolstan, the leading lady of Mr. Walker Whiteside's company, will rest during the Foly Week at her home, rejoining the company in Pittsburg on Luster Mooray. This will notify her flends of her arrival. Otherwise, many of them would miss seeing her." That would indeed be terrible, dear Miss Lella Wolstan's mommer! May they all rush in and overwhelm her with congratulations.

It is said that four American man-teers are after the new play. "The Transgressor." in which Miss Olga Nethersole has made such a hit in London. The play is said to be worth nothing without Miss Nethersole, and the four American managers are not taking this into consideration.

"Willie" is the name of a new comedy by Klein that Charles Dickson will pro-duce when he comes to the Bijou Thea-tre. It tells a story of two bookmakers. One an author and the other a race-track gentleman. Mr. Dickson has been ap-pearing out of town in a piece called "Admitted to the Bar."

Both the Harvard and the Yale crews "I didn't jump at Arthur Law's new have had the benefit of unusually good farce. It took me two Keyes and Bancroft have been coaching good weeks to get it, and there was at Cambridge, and Bob Cook has spent work on this side of the vater and work a few days at New Haven. He says what he has been saying all along, that "the material is promisising." The eight is now rowing in the following order: Johnson, stroke; Treadway, No. 7; Cross, No. 6; Dater, No. 5; Longacre, No. 4; Beard, No. 8; Holcomb, No. 2; Armstrong, bow.

It is announced that the annual games of the I. C. A. A. A.—which means Intercollegiate Athletic Asociation—will be held at Berkeley Oval this year May 25. The reasons given for the selection of the Oval in preference to Manhattan Field are that the former ground is cheaper, consequently the Association will make money, and that it has better facilities for taking care of those who run in the morning until the time comes for the afternoon contests. Very good reasons, both of them, but the question is, will not the additional trouble of getting to Berkeley Oval keep a good many people away who would otherwise go? These collegians are expert financiers, however, and have no doubt figured on the matter from every possible point of It is announced that the annual games
